

The Most Expensive Foods in New York

A coffee shop in Brooklyn recently announced they would begin selling America's most expensive cup of coffee. Even without this distinction, it's no secret that the 1%'s favorite playground in U.S. is New York City. And, for good reason. The city has some of the highest end luxury foods you can find, and if money is no object, read on for how you can really treat yourself this year.

$2,000 Pizza

A $1 slice simply won't do for you. Instead, head to Industry Kitchen at the South Street Seaport, and order the 24K Pizza. The wood-fired pie is an international melting pot, topped with white stilton cheese from England, foie gras and black truffles from France, Ossetra caviar from the Caspian Sea and 24-karat gold leaves from Ecuador.

If you're feeling a little guilty about spending a small fortune on junk food, fear not, 10% of the sales from every 24k Pizza sold will be given to City Harvest, an organization dedicated to rescuing food for New York's hungry.
