

Halloween cocktails in NYC: Spooky sips around the city

By Nicole Levy

nicole.levy@amny.com

Updated October 28, 2017 12:39 PM

You may not be trick-or-treating for candy anymore, but you can definitely go pub-crawling for cocktails this Halloween.

Bartenders around the city are taking the autumnal holiday as an excuse to invent new beverages that channel its macabre spirit.

This month, trade in your red Solo cup of Pabst at a house party for a glass of one of the specialty drinks below:

Industry Kitchen's Crazy Clown

Photo Credit: Industry Kitchen

Pegged to the release of "It," the horror film based on the Stephen King novel, this cocktail is equal parts rum and peach schnapps. The mixologists at Industry Kitchen are adding orange juice, lemon juice, simple syrup, bitters and grenadine (a reddish pomegranate syrup) to give their clownish concoction bite and color. ($14, 70 South St., at Maiden Lane, South Street Seaport, 212-487-9600, industry-kitchen.com)