

The 7 most outrageous Halloween treats for sale this year

By GINA SALAMONE

| NEW YORK DAILY NEWS | OCT 27, 2017 | 6:52 PM

"The Skull," a candy-based pizza offered through Halloween at Industry Kitchen, the South Street Seaport restaurant. (Industry Kitchen/Industry Kitchen)

Too old to go trick-or-treating? All the better. These creepy sweets and sips are far cooler than anything you'd earn going door-to-door in your neighborhood. So hurry up and snag these wondrous Halloween treats before they're killed off for the season.

The Skull

It's hard to figure out which is scarier — the bloody-looking skull atop this dessert or the fact that it's actually on the pizza menu. Called "The Skull," this candy-based pie is available through Halloween at Industry Kitchen (70 South St.), the modern pizza restaurant in the South Street Seaport. Piled on top of an orange crust is Nutella sauce, toppings ranging from marshmallows to smoked cotton candy and gummy worms, and a caramel skull. The best part: once it's served, staff members pour hot red chocolate onto the skull as you watch the caramel concoction melt. The chilling confection sells for $21.